Let us know if you have any viable off-specs.

Heals on either Druid or Monk. I usually keep up with a DPS off-spec, but really prefer healing.

These are my last real relevant logs. It's from about the first two months of Tomb of Sargeras, where shortly after starting Maiden progression I quit the game until recently. You can also look at my Nighthold logs, but they are a little watered down since I didn't start healing NH until a few months into progression when my guild needed another healer so I switched from Warrior.

At the moment, I'm leaning towards wanting to play Monk, as I've played Druid for a while now, but I'm not opposed to staying Druid either.

What resources do you use to keep up with your class? *

As I've been focused on Monk the past few weeks since I came back, I've been keeping up with the PeakOfSerenity website and Discord. Logs are also a good way to judge what you're doing compared to others, especially for specific fights in regards to spell distribution, targets, etc.... Ever since Legion, the best place to start is always the Discord, and it usually branches out from there depending on the class. During Legion I played both Resto Druid and Arms Warrior at different points, and both had extensive Google Docs about play-styles and gearing and such, so I would keep up to date on those. Reviewing documents and articles and learning more information about what I'm playing is one of the more fun reasons I play the game personally.

Outline your relevant raiding experience, including the guilds you were in previously and why you left them. *

My current experience is lacking a little bit, particularly since Argus. I've raided this expansion more than I haven't though. I raided as an officer in the guild Sponsored/Calculated throughout EN/ToV/NH/ToS. I started as Resto Druid, but switched to Warrior at the start of NH progression to fill a position we needed. During the later weeks of NH progression, I switched back to Resto Druid. We had various issues on and off during those days, but I think we finished 14th in Nighthold on Mal'Ganis. I raided for the first few months of Tomb, but quit around the time we hit Maiden as I mentioned earlier. That would have been around September of last year, and I haven't really played since then. NH and Tomb especially really took a lot out of me because of how those fights were structured, but I'm optimistic about how BfA will turn out, as it looks like it will be a more polished version of Legion.

I've always been in pursuit of high-end raiding throughout the entire time I've played this game. I started raiding in TBC where I played Resto Shaman originally. We killed Illidan pre-nerf and made it a few bosses into Sunwell before Wrath hit. During Wrath I raided pretty heavily in both 10 and 25 man throughout the first tier, and I remember clearing Malygos and 3D Sarth early on. I took a break from raiding after Ulduar and raided casually throughout most of Cataclysm. During Mists, I came back full time and started a guild called Protect The Lumber on Mal'Ganis with a bunch of friends I met. I switched to Resto Druid at that time as well. We took 10 man raiding pretty seriously during that time and we cleared Throne of Thunder and SoO within the top 100 US. Since I was in college at that time and had a lot of free time, I also raided 25 man in the guild Seraph with my alt Holy Paladin. I took another break and just played casually through WoD, but came back for Legion.

Why do you want to join Potent? What sets you apart from other players? *

Feel free to brag as much as you want. If you're good at something, tell us.

A big reason why I'm interested is because of the raid times. My ideal has always been 2-day raiding guilds, but most guilds do 3 days, so I always got roped into that when searching for mythic guilds. I love the idea of being efficient with our time and the goal of getting top 75 US is something I share as well.

I think the main thing that sets me apart from others is how long I've been doing this. I don't seem to run into many people anymore with experience going all the way back to the early days. While that doesn't necessarily make someone good skill-wise, I think it certainly helps. My attitude on any raid day is pretty simple. I come in to get shit done. I come prepared with all the consumables I need, and I'm there to do my job. When I'm playing, it's gonna be 100% me trying to perfect the fight each attempt. It usually takes me a few attempts to get the general rhythm of the fight, and from there it's all about minimizing possible mistakes and figuring out how to best position myself. Once I have the fight figured out, it's all about consistency for me in terms of timing, positioning, spell usage, etc. Getting to where every attempt I'm doing almost the exact same things at every point is how I love to play.

We raid Friday/Saturday, 8:30pm-12:30am EST. Will you be able to consistently make these days/times? *

Failure to maintain near-perfect attendance will likely result in the loss of your raiding spot.

Tell us a little about yourself. *

I'm a 26 year old guy that works in Software QA for a small company in Missouri. I went to college for Computer Science, but ended up not enjoying programming enough to do just that for a living. I've been a gamer all my life, and I especially love the competitive side of gaming. Fantasy Football is starting up soon, and I'm the commissioner of a league full of college friends, so preparing for that has been taking up a lot of my time recently. Other than that, I love going to the movies and watching thoughtful entertainment as there's always an opportunity to learn something from art.
