Outline your relevant raiding experience, including the guilds you were in previously and why you left them. *

At the beginning of the expansion, I was a returning player, having not played since WoD with a guild called Legacy Reborn on A52. Initially was going to play with them , but my scheduled changed.

As a returning player, I had trouble finding a guild, so I ended up in Toast on A52. That group fell apart rather quickly.

Ended up joining Reign of Fire for a bit, but was asked to go blood for 2-3weeks in a row on prog for them after they recruited me as dps. I don't mind going blood when needed, but it was quickly becoming me main speccing as blood, which isn't what I signed up for.

A friend approached me about starting up a raid team. So we did. It was called Fusion. I was raid lead. Our group got 3/8M in 4 weeks, then we fell apart as well - the guy who started the guild burnt out and quit, and several other raiders quit playing wow as well. After several nights of <15 people, we called it quits. While I was in Fusion, I swapped to my hunter, as I couldn't quite raid lead and play my DK super effectively. The hunter went much better for that.

After Fusion fell apart, I applied to Biggie Chief and Da Boyz on A52 on my hunter, where I'm currently trialing. Their raid times don't conflict with yours, and I'm applying on my DK.

As far as prog goes, my current prog is 5/8 (kills), and I've seen Vectis down to <10%, just wasn't in on the boss for Biggie's reclear.

What resources do you use to keep up with your class? *

Generally I cross-reference wowhead and icyveins for information at a baseline. Next step is combing the community discord for a given class and asking questions actively. Lastly, there's wcl. I go through a given fight ahead of time to see where top players of my class are using or delaying major abilities and what their damage breakdowns look like.

Why do you want to join Potent? What sets you apart from other players? *

Feel free to brag as much as you want. If you're good at something, tell us.

Excellence on a two-night schedule has always been attractive to me. Legacy Reborn is a two-night guild, and that's kind of my background. I was searching for a team I could join with a friend - Canonized - Akama. Potent fits both of our raid times and progression mindsets. We're not a package deal, would just like to raid together if a team is willing to take both of us.

I'm a pretty analytical player. Warcraftlogs is a powerful tool for analyzing a fight - What defensives are being used when, what offensives, what add priority should look like, etc. For progression, the pace of a fight and what abilities are used in order to get a team from one phase to the next is easy to track through logs. So are mistakes. I use my analytical mindset and that tool to be a communicative and well-prepared player.

I also learn fast and adapt to situations quickly. After each attempt, I ask myself what I could've done better for the team and for my personal dps. I make heavy use of add-ons like death note and details to figure out what went wrong in the moment, and how I could've performed more optimally.

Tell us a little about yourself. *

I'm a 27 y/o MD who decided pretty late (after I graduated) in the game that practicing medicine wasn't for me. So now I'm playing the hell out of world of warcraft, weight training, and tutoring rich people. Honestly, it's the dream.
