Outline your relevant raiding experience, including the guilds you were in previously and why you left them. *

I would argue(because it helps my case) that all raid experience is relevant. I was a 5-6 day a week raider back in Vanilla-LK Clearing all content, clearing Heroic Firelands and Heroic/Mythic SoO before life and deployments got in the way(I'm no longer in the military).

This expansion and raid tier is my first time being able to commit myself to a guild and find that high level of efficiency and success, which has been hard to find so far.

I was in a small guild that managed to killed 5/9 Heroic BOD before jumping around and finding the guild I am currently raiding in.

Auras - We are 3/9, though I am 4/9, being able to run with a group for a Mythic Conclave kill, though admittedly that kill wasnt my best show.

Without blasting you all with a wall of text, I am looking to leave Auras because of the consistent inconsistency. There is a lack of motivation and drive by too many of the core group to show up prepared or with a positive attitude, ready to play at as high a level as they can that hinders the raid and there is often time a refusal to adapt(or even attempt) strategies to the groups play style that would help.

What resources do you use to keep up with your class? *

Icy Viens, and Wow head. I read the patch notes in depth and watch guides on youtube for classes, though taking some with a grain of salt as it could just be a random person talking nonsense, but I try and find those in top guilds and follow their logs, and videos/streams if they have any.

Why do you want to join Potent? What sets you apart from other players? *

Feel free to brag as much as you want. If you're good at something, tell us.

I want to join because you're obviously efficient and I can make 100% of the raids, baring real life stuff. I also like the guild name!

I pride myself on is doing the little things better than others. Using typhoon/Vortex.

I'm vocal, in the sense that I'm comfortable talking in raids in a detailed concise manner, like on Opulence for the switch and unless there is a designation for Mech, calling out colors and stuff if I'm in a bot.

The amount I can play probably sets me apart right now... sadly i have 8 120's, though I'm cutting back on playing them all. Hard to focus, my druid's neck is only 43.

My main alt is Prot Warrior so I can see the raids through that point of view and then a Rogue.

I also have a 120 of each healer aside from a resto shaman right now just to understand how they currently play and how to try and adjust my play style to adapt and be the most efficient depending on the raid comp.

I like playing with people who are better than me, and push me to step my game up. Currently there is a lot of complacency and the 'just getting by is ok' type mentality. I hate it. I was too ingrained into pushing for the best in the beginning of this game while I was a teenager and it's stuck with me every since in damn near every aspect of life(that I cared about anyway!). The no big deal, don't call anyone out for mistakes and don't worry about attitude to raiding drives me insane.

I enjoy and arguably need to be pushed and have to compete and I feel like given your success and the amount you raid it'll push me to constantly be striving for more.

I also like to talk shit and you have to be damn good to talk shit.

How did you hear about Potent? *

WoWprogress and seeing members around.

Tell us a little about yourself. *

I'm 29, going to school full time and have a ton of time. My fiancé is going to med school, so she's pretty damn busy all the time and so my life is pretty simple right now. Wake up, take care of the dog, go to school /gym and then warcraft. I'd love to have a consistent group for PvP or Mythics, and would love to try and reach consistent high keys. 15+, though my highest so far is a 12. Rough pugs and worse guild mates at times have made things difficult.

When I was in the army, I used to joke that raiding hardcore early wow guilds made things in the Army easier. I was already used to showing up early and fully prepared, putting my work in before hand because raid time was for raiding. Everything that was required to raid was to be done on your time or you wouldn't raid. No hand outs. On top of being early and prepared, during the raid, if you messed up, we got our asses chewed the fuck out. Was part of the culture as I'm sure many of you know, but it ingrained that, be in the right place, doing the right thing at the right time because 39 other people are counting on you to do that job, so they can do theirs.

This is turning into a wall of text again, so I apologize for that.
Would love to answer any questions on discord or in game!

Thanks for reading!
